| In regard to living/working standards, civil rights, or foreign policy, what problems do we have in our society? | • Historically, what specific demands/requests did people make in this area? (i.e. What problems did they notice?)
• Why did they think this was a problem? |
| What are our choices for addressing each problem?                                 | What approaches did people take to try to address these perceived needs and concerns?
• What was the proposed solution?
• Why did they choose this solution?
• What methods did people use to try to convince others to support this solution? |
| What are the potential effects of each choice (including "doing nothing")?        | • What were the consequences when this issue was ignored?
• What were the effects of the various methods people used to try to fix this problem?
• Why were certain methods successful and others were not? |
| What reasons might different groups have for supporting or opposing each choice?  | • For what reasons did different groups support each method of reform?
• For what reasons did different groups oppose each method of reform? |
| What should we do?                                                                | What worked or didn’t work in the past? Why?                                             |
